

Rabbit Nutrition Factsheet

Feeding Herbs and Vegetables

To provide dietary variety and behavioural enrichment, suitable fresh herbs and vegetables to feed rabbits as a treat include:

Broccoli

Basil

Cabbage

Mint

Parsley

Radicchio

Watercress

Bok/Pak choy

Celery leaves

Kale

Endive

Carrot tops

Coriander

Beet tops

Vegetables

Rabbit-friendly vegetables are easily available from supermarkets and should always be washed before feeding. However, artificially reared vegetables do not have the same nutritional content as wild food.

Wild Plants

With care, wild grasses and weeds, can also be fed, as long as the client is confident in identifying suitable plants and sources them sensibly:

- Away from wild rabbit and rodent colonies to avoid disease transmission;
- Away from roads to avoid petrol and lead toxicity.

Owners can also grow suitable plants in their own gardens and window boxes from packets of rabbit-friendly seeds.

Fruit

Fruit should be regarded as a treat and only fed in limited amounts. This is because, in rabbit terms, it is high in simple sugars and can lead to gastro-intestinal disturbances and acquired dental disease.
